

The Cotton Gin was invented by Eli Whitney in 1794. It was a small, simple device using metal brushes and wooden rollers to remove the seeds from cotton balls. It was a labor saving device that advanced the Industrial Revolution to the next level in cotton production for the factories.

